ATLANTA PODCAST

Planning & Proposal

Consult the relevant sections from WOVENText on podcasts and listen to example podcasts provided by Dr. Sturm. Complete proposal form.

Process

Groups should document their entire process, including annotated primary and secondary sources, group notes, storyboarding and revision, and peer-review notes. I suggest doing read through of a complete draft of your script with your group. Have one member act as a peer-reviewer for the read through and to clock your script. Consider tone, pacing, range of rhetorical gestures, use of secondary sources to establish expertise, and how effectively the segment meets the project description. Familiarize yourself with Audacity or comparable recording software and rent a snowball microphone from the GT Gadgets Library to record your podcast.

Final Artifact

Upload to SoundCloud with relevant image and description.

Atlanta tries to hit one into the stands

Project Description

As a group, students will create a podcast episode that investigates and animates a narrative within the Ivan Allen Digital Archive. The podcast will 1) tell a story about an event or issue related to the history of Atlanta during Ivan Allen, Jr.'s administration; 2) describe the historical and cultural context of the event or issue; and 3) be based on use of material from the Ivan Allen Digital Archive. This podcast will be an educational, entertaining documentary snapshot of a particular story within the history of Atlanta. The primary goal of this artifact is to develop a competent, functional narrative that accurately exposes your audience to your topic. The primary challenge is how to animate this textual-visual archive in an oral medium. The final podcast will be 8-10 minutes long. Consider the "Buried Truths" podcast as a guiding example of how to approach your podcast planning and design.
